Urban Health Plan Announces Plans for Expanded Health Care Services to Medically Underserved Communities in the South Bronx

Enterprise, Goldman Sachs, Nonprofit Finance Fund and Stonehenge Community Development Partner in New Markets Tax Credits Financing of Facility Expansion

Bronx, NY April 14, 2011 – Urban Health Plan (UHP), a network of federally qualified community health centers based in the South Bronx and Queens, today announced plans to build a six-story, 54,000 square-foot community health clinic, expanding its services to medically underserved communities in the South Bronx, including Hunts Points, Mott Haven and Morrisania. The $55.5 million transaction will nearly double the number of annual primary care visits (medical, dental, vision and mental health) to more than 400,000 by 2016.

“The planned expansion of our facilities and services will enable us to provide quality, affordable care to at least 20,000 new patients,” said Paloma Hernandez, president and CEO of Urban Health Plan. “It will make it possible for us to continue to impact and improve the health outcomes of our community,” she added.

Enterprise Community Investment, Inc. (Enterprise), Goldman Sachs Urban Investment Group, Nonprofit Finance Fund and Stonehenge Community Development recently closed on the financing of the expansion of Urban Health Plan. UHP’s new clinic facility will be built to the U.S. Green Building Council’s LEED Rating System™ Silver standard. Construction of the new facility is scheduled to begin in May and expected to create 110 permanent full-time jobs and 250 direct construction jobs.

The New Markets Tax Credit (NMTC) transaction was structured in part with a $15.0 million allocation of NMTCs from Enterprise, a national leader in community development and one of the largest allocatees of NMTC, a $15.7 million allocation of NMTC from Nonprofit Finance Fund and a $7.1 million allocation of NMTC from Stonehenge Community Development. Goldman Sachs provided substantially all of the outside financing for the project, including more than $20 million in debt financing and $10.5 million in NMTC equity to the project.

“Our allocation of $15 million in New Markets Tax Credits for Urban Health Plan, and our partnership with the other funders of this project are true testaments to how communities can be transformed with the use of this innovative financing,” said Joseph Wesolowski, senior vice president, Diversified Financial Products, Enterprise. “Once completed, the center will have the ability to expand its health care services and provide jobs to one of the most severely distressed congressional districts in the country.”

"We are proud to finance this monumental project for Urban Health Plan," said Alicia Glen, Managing Director and Head of the Urban Investment Group at Goldman Sachs. "The new facility will be a major contributor to the ongoing revitalization of the South Bronx by creating jobs and expanding the availability and range of critical healthcare services for its residents."

Founded in 1974, Urban Health Plan offers a full spectrum of primary and specialty medical care for men, women and children including obstetrics and gynecology, pediatrics, adolescent medicine, adult primary care, urgent care, dental health and mental health. UHP serves residents in the Hunts Point, Mott Haven and Morrisania communities of the South Bronx, where there are substantially higher rates of diabetes, asthma, obesity, HIV, AIDS and mental health problems compared to the rest of New York City.

“NMTC is a useful federal incentive to attract capital to low income communities, allowing projects such as this one to be financed,” said Norah McVeigh, Managing Director, Nonprofit Finance Fund. “Access to health care is a critical need in these communities, and so helping existing and successful centers expand capacity is invaluable.”

UHP’s new facility has been brought to fruition in large part due to a $12 million Facilities Improvement Program grant from the Health Resources and Services Administration of the U.S Department of Health and Human Services, covering 22% of the $55.5 million project cost. The FIP grant was awarded as part of the American Reinvestment and Recovery Act. Additional financing for the project was made possible through the generous support of the New York City Council, Bronx Borough President Ruben Diaz, Jr. and State Senator Ruben Diaz.

"At Stonehenge, we are very proud to support Urban Health Plan in its continued efforts to increase access to quality healthcare in one of our nation's most distressed communities," said L'Quentus Thomas, Vice President, Stonehenge Capital Company. "The project represents a powerful example of how community based leadership by UHP and an innovative use of the New Markets Tax Credit program on the part of Stonehenge and our colleagues in finance can drive positive community impact where it is most needed."
